FLAGS: SYMBOLS OF UNITY AND DIVERSITY
by Dawn Folan

High school is closer to the core of the American experience than anything else I can think of.

— Kurt Vonnegurt, Jr.

Here at Cambridge Rindge and Latin School, there is a multitude of races and cultures. We have exchange programs that allow our students to visit other countries and attend their schools and to have their students come here to learn about us. Also, there are students from many other countries attending C.R.L.S. regularly.

In the fieldhouse and the main cafeteria, we can see all the flags that represent the various countries belonging to the students who attend C.R.L.S. Each student is very proud of their country's flag. For example, when one flag was accidentally forgotten, the students wrote to the country themselves and asked for a flag.

All of this exposure to different cultures gives us an advantage in our future dealings with other people. It helps to prevent close-mindedness and has shown us that with all of our differences, we have more in common than we had ever imagined possible.

C.R.L.S. has provided us with an education that cannot be matched by most other high schools. It has shown us the similarities and differences among all people.

Why "Kaleidoscope"?

We, the people that compose the class of 1990, are diverse. Our class has representatives from nearly every country and race and this diversity stimulates us to become high achievers.

To honor this diversity, our yearbook is named "KALEIDOSCOPE." A kaleidoscope through a scattering of colored glass transforms the energy of light into many beautiful, symmetrical patterns. In the same way, the energy of the staff and students at C.R.L.S. transformed the dissonance of contrasting programs, interests, cultures, and race into an ever changing but consistently harmonious configuration.

The vibrancy and energy of the C.R.L.S. community is not only seen in its exceptional academic performance but is also visible in every corner of the school. Whether it is people socializing between classes in the halls or carefully planning the senior trip in the student service center the people of C.R.L.S. always manage to achieve their goals, while at the same time enjoying themselves. Through a healthy interest in learning, a flair for resourcefulness, and a knack for having fun, the students and staff at C.R.L.S. have successfully reached a happy medium between work and play.

We now present to you the class of 1990, the living kaleidoscope.

THE SEMI-FORMAL

Our Semi-Formal took place on May 19, 1989 at the Cambridge Marriott Hotel. The crystal chandeliers and mirrored walls of the ballroom created a beautiful atmosphere that added to the elegance of the evening. Couples arrived, splendidly dressed in formal suits and gowns. Black silk and royal blue were the most popular dress colors.

Dinner was served fashionably late. We ate a scrumptious meal of fruit, chicken, rice, and a pastry dessert. After dinner everyone jumped out of their seats and onto the dance floor. The DJs, Sound Wave Music Productions, played a wide variety of popular music. The fantastic evening ended far too soon for some and many went on to celebrate longer with their friends.

STUDENT WORK TO BECOME HISTORIC TIME CAPSULE AT CITY HALL

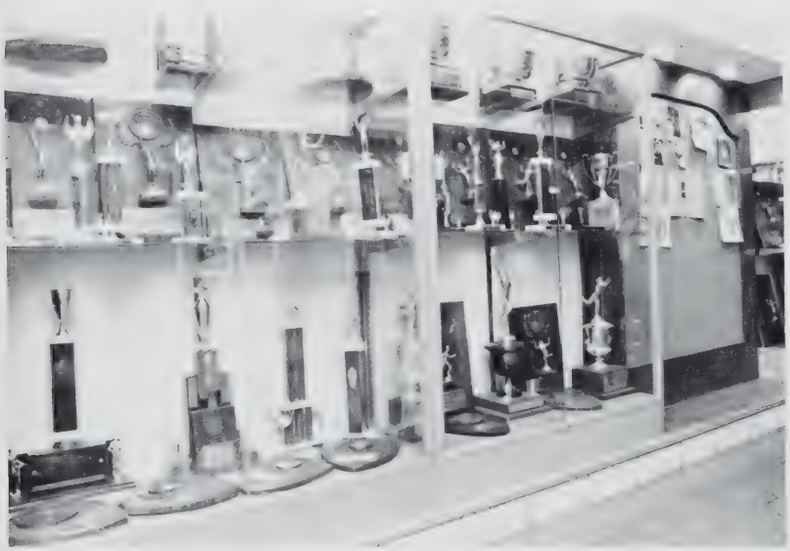
By Arno Latimer

Recently the carpentry class of Cambridge R&L's Rindge Technical Vocational Program (RTVP) has been working on a special request project for City Hall by Mayor Al Vellucci. Mr. Ernie Therrien (Carpentry teacher) directed and planned the project with the help of eleven students. The group successfully built a beautiful, solid oak chest. The beautifully finished work, from the glossy varnish to the shining brass trimmings, looks very professional-built by tomorrow's carpenters and wood workers who put a lot of time and effort into the project.

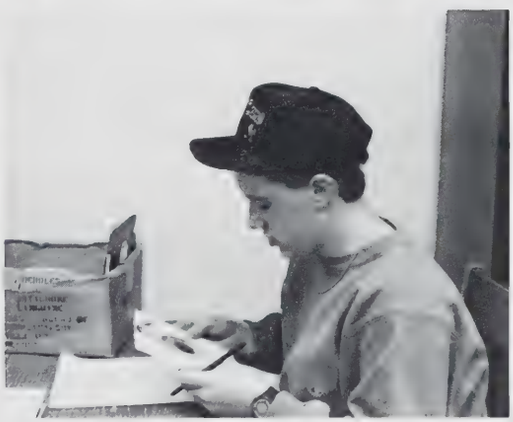
The chest is to be used as a time capsule and will be locked away at City Hall for one hundred years and reopened generations later. Souvenirs and items stored today by city officials will become artifacts tomorrow. The chest is to be placed in the center entrance of City Hall, a building given to the city of Cambridge by Fredrick H. Rindge, the man for whom our school and RTVP was named.

The chest of today will be tomorrow's relic. Future people will see that teens of the past and talent and impressive skills in constructing the chest.

The students involved were Eddie Arruda, Dana Gardinier, Tommy Griffen, Gorge Pires, Ricky Raposa, Tony Rodrigues, Josh Shaw, Richie Walliams, Jimmy Driscoll, Eddie Tavares, and Arno Latimer.



WRLS



WRLS is our own CRLS radio station. The station is housed in the high school. Daily broadcasts can be heard on channel 47 of the Cambridge Cable television systems. WRLS celebrates its seventh year of operation this year.

''Radio Broadcast Journalism'' is a ten credit English course which is offered for two consecutive semesters. Passing grades and good attendance are mandatory for entrance into the class. This is stressed by Ms. Sandra Dickerson, the founder of the station. Ms. Linda Lipkin helped keep us in the groove during Ms. Dickerson's absence.

Students who take the class can expect to work hard. The curriculum is rigorous. Many students join the class assuming that spinning records is all there is to the course. However, this is not the case. Research reports and heavy homework assignments are required. Daily news writing is also required for each broadcast. There are some fringe benefits and students having their own radio programs is one such benefit. Such programs as ''Good Morning Cambridge'' which is hosted by Tyrone Davis and Darren McRandall's ''British Invasion,'' Matt Williams' ''Long Haired Legacy'' and Willie Smith's ''Slow Jams'' are but a few examples.

Approximately fifty percent of those students who have taken the broadcasting class have gone on to major in communications in college or they have been affiliated with either college or professional radio in some capacity. WRLS boasts of such alumni as Ray Leonard ''the heavyweight of radio,'' Josh Brickman of WERS and the late Jesse Mckee of WERS who had formed his own independent production company.

Performing Arts

One of the most popular aspects of the C.R.L.S. Arts Community is the Performing Arts Program. With the help of Gerry Speca, Barbara Ulrich, Steve Hall and Judith Contrucci, president of the Drama Guild, this program has built a respected reputation as a result of hard work. Due to this hard work, the students in the dance class have put lively energetic dance concerts on stage, and the students in the acting classes have put their talents in to the improv troupe, fall and summer shows, and the widely popular Drama Festival. Dedication, faith, and talent have led to first-rate shows.

Drama

Comedia Mania

"Comedia Mania" was one of the two winners of the 1989 Drama Festival. The play was derived from Comedia Dell'Arte, a type of improvised theatre, common during Italian Renaissance, which used basic characters as a framework.

The Drama troupe went on to showcase their energetic performance in Gilford, New Hampshire, the location of the New England Drama Festival. This win was the third win in a row for the C.R.L.S. Drama Company. Their work was exciting and enjoyable for all to watch.

"Godspell" was the summer musical performed at the end of July, 1989. The rehearsals went from the middle of June to the end of July. The five performances that took place were a great success causing many to laugh and cry. The combination of dancing and acting made the performances so enjoyable to watch that many people came back to see it again.

To the Class of 1990,

Publishing a yearbook is an enormous task that required commitment, extreme pressure for deadlines, and sacrifice of our personal time. However, we had a lot of fun meeting new people, cooperating with each other, and stuffing our faces with Saturday lunches. Special thanks to Kathy Mahoney for her generous contribution of time and energy. Thanks to the Writing Center, the Art Department, and the Copy Center for their services. Also thanks to all unnamed contributors. After months of slaving and playing, we present to you the result of our dedicated work, the 1990 yearbook.

Good Luck! We wish you the best.

The Yearbook Room

With the help of the school community, the yearbook staff has a new home. The Art Department donated space and Mr. Sarasin gave us money for materials. The R.T.V.P. program built the room and the yearbook staff provided the polish.

A special note of thanks to the Parents Advisory Committee for helping with money to purchase a Macintosh Computer. Part of this year's production has been through a new desk top publishing program offered through Jostens Publishing Co.

Thanks to the cooperation of all concerned, the production of the yearbook is now easier and more professional.

The Berlin Wall

Freedom Over The Wall

The week before Thanksgiving, East and West Berliners joined together for the first time in 28 years to celebrate the wonderful feelings of freedom. The country had been divided by the Berlin Wall. This wall symbolized the worst possible division these people have encountered. Families had been separated, and many died trying to cross over. The people had tried their very best to live contentedly, but they could not erase the fear that existed in their hearts.

Finally, they heard that the wall would be destroyed. They walked towards it in groups, some for more than three hours. They sang loudly, and joyously, for they knew that the end of their heartfelt misery was soon to come. The man-made traffic was welcomed with cheers as they approached the wall that had separated them for so long. Thousands of East Berliners climbed the 10-foot wall and jumped down into the comforting arms of liberty. What was once a sign of the cold war between the two countries was slowly crumbling, and the angry Berliners chanted "Knock the wall down."

Only a piece of the wall was actually destroyed, but the end result, more freedom and liberty, brought heartfelt smiles to all.

The Blood Drive

In October, The American Red Cross held its annual ''blood drive'' in the C.R.L.S. Theatre. Mr. McGillicuddy and a number of his chemistry students helped the Red Cross nurses set up and run the blood drive. The donors began by filling out several forms and having their blood typed. They then mounted the table and a nurse extracted a pint of blood (a painless process). After donating blood, the doners sat at the ''canteen'' (a refreshment table) for fifteen minutes. Some donors experienced lightheadedness, but most experienced no ill symptoms post-donation. Though donation was down from last year, C.R.L.S. can be proud to have helped the Red Cross collect badly needed blood.

The C.R.L.S. Logo Contest

The C.R.L.S. community decided this year that the Indian Warrior mascot was stereotypical and should not represent a school that prides itself on its diversity. A contest was run to find a new mascot and school colors that would not be insulting to any part of the C.R.L.S. community.

A committee was formed consisting of concerned students, teachers, administration, a coach, and an alumnus. Mr. Gaynor, the non-voting head of the committee, directed the process of making rules and voting. The committee selected five semi-finalists out of sixty-four entries (see below). Then, the entire school voted for the logo which will represent our school and all sports activities in the years to come.

The winning mascot is the falcon, drawn by Letwan Baxter, a freshman in Fundamental. Letwan said, "I wanted our mascot to be a strong-figured bird that other teams would fear." Mr. Gaynor said, "It is my belief that the FALCON will represent us well, portraying a lofty and powerful image in both our academic and athletic programs here at C.R.L.S." The Yearbook Staff congratulates Letwan Baxter and admires the school community for its willingness to accept change. We welcome the falcon, the start of a new tradition.

Crayola

I would like to be a box of 64 Crayola Crayons. There is so much available, so much potential, in that one little box.

Each of the different colors — green, purple, yellow — contains knowledge of millions of things. A single color could be an apple, a little wagon, the smile on a child's face, a blazing fire. All the colors together cover the entire color spectrum. The hues within each color, the burnt sienna or bittersweet brown, the carnation or salmon pink, can show different shades of a spectrum of emotion. The range of expression is limitless. The bright colors hold within their wrappers memories of a magical clown. The grays and dull colors may be the puddles outside a window streaked with the sky's tears, seen only when a blot of lightning illuminates the scene.

All of these things and emotions are contained inside that one box. If copper or apricot or mulberry feels dull, it has the ability to sharpen itself, right on the back of the box. In addition, a hand assisting the crayons can open new doors. The combination of the potential within the carton, the sparked incentive, and the vast outlet for creativity can lead the crayons to exercise all of their powers.

Unlike markers, crayons are usable until they are completely gone. It gets a little harder to do specific things as a crayon gets really short, but the crayon is still capable of all of its functions until all that is left are pieces of torn wrapper and memories of what it has done.

Would I really like to be a box of 64 Crayola Crayons? In a sense, each person is a box of crayons, of one size or another. Assisted by the hands of family, education, society, a person expands in different directions, some realizing more potential than others. I feel that life is a blank sheet of paper, for each to do as she wants. Some people limit themselves by dictating thick, black borders within which they must stay. I would like my sheet of paper to have no boundaries, and I plan to use every color in my box until the end.

— Laura Okun

Love in the Wrong Place?

I look over in that direction
Pondering, I wonder if it's my place?
So different, appealing
Excitement!
"Trouble exists"
Ill-Matched
Here is your place
Here I belong?
Suitable, respectful
But not my true desire
Too similar
Boring
Different is intriguing
New places:
Deep and desirable
SCARY
The voices are endless,
Never cease
Leave me alone
It's my life
It is my place
Where is my place?

— Alexie Nichols

Static Bliss

The year 2436: earth's yearly waste is disposed into waste canisters, black-iron cylinders with a diameter of 250 feet. Dump the trash in; seal top; launch into space.

A small girl sitting on a rock in the center of a dark pond. The rock is slippery, but the girl sits cross-legged, balanced on top. She leans down and picks a small, white flower next to the rock. The pond is surrounded by tall, black cliffs, unreachable, unscalable. The only light, pale and blue, comes from the circle at the top of the cliffs. The cliffs are not very far, but the pond is deep.

A fold of the girl's yellow dress flops into the water as the girls shifts her position. As it touches the surface, it turns black, then dissolves. The girl does not notice. She picks petals from the flower and lets them go, watching them float on a small breeze, only to drift down to the pond where they disappear.

The light from above the cliffs begins almost imperceptibly to dim. The girl looks up at the tall cliffs for a moment. She sees a sliver of a circle covering the top of one cliff. As she returns to picking at the flower, she hums a slow, somber tune. The girl's voice bounces off the surface of the pond, and echoes from the cliffs, searching for a means of escape. It finally finds its way out of the opening which is now half covered. Once out, the melancholy tones are drowned and suppressed by the din of active machinery.

When the cliffs are fully covered, the girl picks the last petal, and puts it to her lips. With the last note of her tune, a deafening hissing begins. A bright blue point of light circles around the crack. Once the circle is complete the hissing stops as abruptly as it began. There is a faint rumble and a sudden feeling of movement.

The girl screams.

The Birth Of The Wind

There was a time when the earth was still. The motionless air was packed down into thick sediments under the weight of the sky. The solid heaviness of the atmosphere couldn't carry the bright sound of the swallow nor could it relay the deep grumblings of the stones. The mountains were flat puddles of compressed granite. The silenced waters were veins of polished zinc captured beneath thick glass. The trees were crumbling pillars bent towards the earth in the pressure of stillness. All the animals lay on the earth in motionless sleep. The small, yellow butterflies lay dreaming with their torn wings to the ground. The horses and sheep remained fallen on their sides as carbon and silver seeped across their hides from the rich soil. The animals dreamed together in their amber prison of heavy sun light. The world was frozen in an invisible pool of tar.

In this still earth there lay a melancholy woman named Sigh. She was old and alone and dreamed that the heaviness of the air on her body was the touch of lovers and friends. Her tan skin was dry and loose, and her cloudy hair spread onto the reddish earth like the tangled roots of an oak. The veins on her closed hands pumped with life and her strong breathing pushed against the tomb of air encasing the world.

Sigh was a very wise woman. In her dreams, she has seen the world, lived a thousand years, and heard the rocks and animals dream. She had tasted the minerals of the earth, felt the swell of life in her body, and smelled the sweet acidity of an orange. Sigh loved her dreams and loved how they made little white flames of excitement smile inside her.

One time, when the deep ochre of dawn brushed her dark skin, Sign began to wonder if there was something more than the beetle wings, sand dunes and gold threads she knew from her dreams. Sigh wondered if there was something she had forgotten.

The ochre dawn became amber day and then turquoise twilight as sigh remembered everything she knew. She listened to the colors of the stars again. She stroked the softness of the animal dreams again. She smelled the spiciness of the earth's roots again. She relived all her dreams until she realized what she had forgotten to dream about. Then, as the underwater twilight faded, Sigh began to dream again to fill the space of the forgotten dream.

Sigh dreamed of motion. She saw a child running and disturbing heavy silence. Limbs and muscles and feelings stretched to rustle the dry air. Fields moved, mountains moved, and the water moved under the small feet. The child laughed and played as the stillness pulled back in fear. Sparkling eyes and rosy hands dug into the earth and overturned the motionlessness. The child told Sigh his name was Wind. The little white flames in Sigh smiled as the child filled her forgetfulness with motion.

As the dream ended, Sigh released a light, happy breath into the dark heaviness of the night. The thick layers of air seemed to stir with a new warmth, creating a cavity of motion in the stillness of the earth. Like the child, the breath played and grew. It spread to lighten the air and lift the sediments. It lifted the fallen columns of the trees and it stirred the polished surface of the waters. It spread the weight of the sky and lifted the mountains towards the brightening sun. It carried the light sounds of the rain and the birds, and it distributed the heavy rolling of the thunder and the deep mumblings of the stones. It thinned the air and woke the dreaming animals. It lifted the butterflies and made the floating petals in the air. It helped the horses and sheep to their feet and let them stretch and smell and see. The breath brought freshness and newness. Sap and blood ran faster in the veins of the world as the breath played and grew.

Sigh woke from her dreams and felt the new motion. she saw it was the child of her dream playing in the trees and lifting the swallows to the sky. Wind, the child, made the yellow butterflies float about her head. Wind touched her body lightly. Sigh saw the waves on the quivering water and felt the smells of the earth come to her on Wind's hands. She felt the lightness of the air and moved easily to gather the hand of Wind in her old hands. The small white flames inside her smiled.

So too did the world, free from its amber prison.

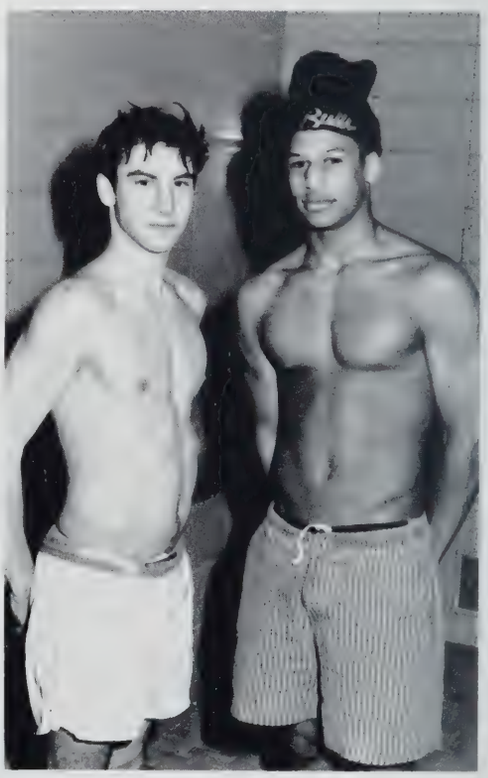
B.R.: Coach "K" Kofsuske, Tom Jiang, Lon Ilic, Erik Black, Florian Hoyndorf, Jason Soto, Qi Zhi Zhong, Diego Sanchez, Vincent Ng, Coach "Hammer" Samp. Missing: Erik Andelman, Yao Feng

This has been a great year for the swim team. We have grown substantially and the stands have been full almost every home meet. We have a great deal of spirit and talent — with 4 sectional qualifiers and the new school records set by Khari Milner. We look forward to more seasons of excellence and improvement.



Girls Swim Team

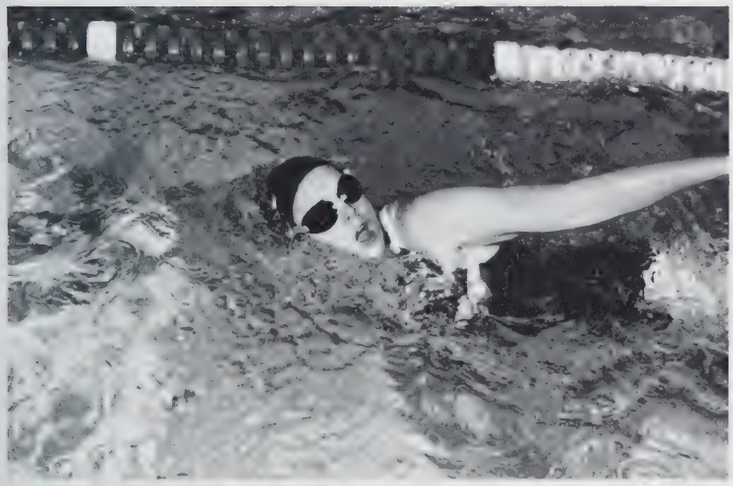
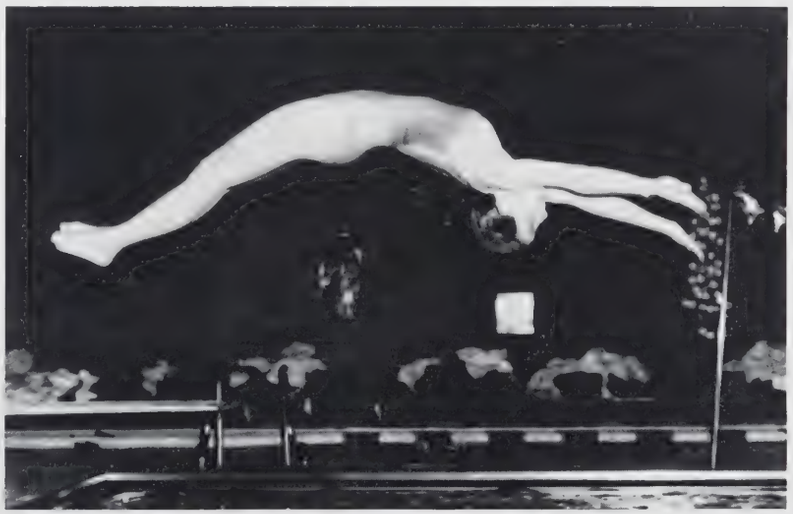
This years' swim team though small in number, was big in spirit. Led by captain Shelley Goodhue, CRLS defeated Somerville, Weymouth South, and Quincy. Senior Laura Okun dove her first year on the team and qualified for the sectionals. Other seniors: Margie Decker, Alexie Nichols, Jen Nangle, and Shelley Goodhue also contributed to this successful season.





Girls Tennis

Suburban League Champions, State Class ''A'' Champions, and Massachusetts State Runner-Ups.

The Boy's Cross Country team had another outstanding season, their eighth undefeated campaign in the past nine years. Led by Boston Globe All-Scholastics Matt Aldrich and Eric Andleman the Harriers finished 2nd at the Hendricken, Manhattan & Brown Invitationals. The Suburban League Champions capped their season with the Class ''A'' Championship at Franklin Park & the All-State Runner-Up trophy in a great battle with Dennis — Yarmouth High Gardiner.

Cambridge will surely miss seniors Aldrich, Andleman, and Capt. Bryce Lindamood but with juniors Karimu Rashad, J.B. Backstrom & super freshman Jesse Cody the future seems bright. Written by: Coach Maguire

Standing L to R: Walter Bernis, Coach Audrey Cabral, Dawn Spellman #5, Brie McDaniels #12, Lauren Dottin #14, Demetria Battles #25, Kim Hamel #11, Amanda Cunningham #10, and Amy Pilarski #24. Kneeling L to R: Antionette Smith #15, Christine Donoforio #13, Capt. Maria Mantia #23, Kenetha Moore #21, and Angelique Smith #22.

Even though with the combination of much talent and high spirits, the team did not have such a successful season as hoped for. Unforseen injuries played a large role in our performance. Better luck next year. Best wishes to seniors: Kenetha Moore, Angelique Smith, Antionette Smith, Christine Donoforio, and Maria Mantia.

Boys Volleyball
